

Bachik bin Abdul Rahman v Public ProsecutorA

COURT OF APPEAL (PUTRAJAYA) — CRIMINAL APPEAL NO J-09-28 OF 2003

AHMAD FAIRUZ CHIEF JUSTICE, RICHARD MALANJUM AND AUGUSTINE PAUL JJCA

15 MARCH 2004

B

Criminal Procedure — Sentence — Concurrent or consecutive — Commencement of sentence — Accused already undergoing imprisonment — Whether imprisonment to commence immediately or after expiration of imprisonment previously sentenced — Criminal Procedure Code ss 282, 292

C

Criminal Procedure — Sentence — Plea of guilty — Principles of — Whether relevant in mitigation — Whether accused should be given credit or discount for pleading guilty

The accused was charged in the sessions court with rape of an 11 year old on 19 September 2001, an offence under s 376 of the Penal Code. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 18 years imprisonment and 12 strokes of the rotan. The sentence was ordered to take effect consecutively to another term of imprisonment of 16 years that the accused was then serving, for an offence that was committed on 14 October 2001. The accused applied to the sessions court for an order that the current sentence run concurrently with the earlier sentence. On appeal to the High Court, the term of imprisonment was reduced to 15 years. The accused now appeals to the Court of Appeal.

DE

Held, dismissing the appeal:

- (1) Section 282(d) of the Criminal Procedure Code prescribes the general rule that a sentence of imprisonment shall take effect from the date on which it was passed unless the court passing sentence otherwise directs (see para 5).
- (2) Section 292 is a specific provision dealing with the date of commencement of a sentence of imprisonment of a person who is already undergoing imprisonment. Under this section, the court may order the imprisonment to commence either immediately or at the expiration of the imprisonment to which he has been previously sentenced (see para 5).
- (3) The combined effect of ss 282 and 292 is that unless the court imposing a sentence says anything to the contrary, the sentence runs from the date on which it was passed (see para 7).
- (4) The exercise of the discretion to determine the date of commencement of the sentence of imprisonment is dependent on the facts and circumstances of each case. In deciding whether the terms of imprisonment should be consecutive or commence at another date, the court should be guided by the one transaction rule and the totality principle (see para 7).
- (5) The position in law is that it is generally accepted that an accused person should be given credit or discount for pleading guilty. The discount that is given is normally a reduction of the sentence by about a third of what would otherwise have been imposed. However, this is not a strict rule

FG*H*I

- A as the court may, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse to grant any discount in an appropriate case (see para 17).
- (6) The sessions court judge made it patently clear that in imposing sentence he had taken into consideration the seriousness of the offence against the background as well as the physical weakness and age of the victim;
- B the element of public interest to be served; the effect of the crime on the victim; the previous sentence being served by the accused; and the need to protect society from persons like the accused (see para 19).

[Bahasa Malaysia summary]

- C Tertuduh telah dituduh di mahkamah sesyen kerana merogol seorang budak berumur 11 tahun pada 19 September 2001, satu kesalahan di bawah s 376 Kanun Keseksaan. Beliau telah mengaku bersalah dan telah dijatuhkan hukuman 18 tahun penjara dan 12 kali sebatan rotan. Hukuman tersebut diperintahkan berkuatkuasa secara berturut-turut dengan satu lagi tempoh pemenjaraan 16 tahun yang tertuduh sedang jalani, untuk satu kesalahan yang dilakukan pada 14 Oktober 2001. Tertuduh telah memohon kepada mahkamah sesyen untuk satu perintah bahawa hukuman semasa dijalani bersama dengan hukuman terdahulu. Dalam rayuan ke Mahkamah Tinggi, tempoh pemenjaraan telah dikurangkan kepada 15 tahun. Tertuduh sekarang merayu ke Mahkamah Rayuan.
- D
- E Diputuskan, menolak rayuan tersebut:
- (1) Seksyen 282(d) Kanun Acara Jenayah memperuntukkan rukun am bahawa satu hukuman pemenjaraan hendaklah mula berkuatkuasa dari tarikh ia dijatuhkan kecuali jika mahkamah yang menjatuhkan hukuman tersebut mengarahkan sebaliknya (lihat perenggan 5).
- F (2) Seksyen 292 adalah satu peruntukan spesifik yang menyebut tentang tarikh bermulanya suatu seksyen berhubung pemenjaraan seseorang yang sedang menjalani hukuman penjara. Di bawah seksyen ini mahkamah boleh memerintahkan pemenjaraan tersebut bermula serta merta atau setelah tamat tempoh pemenjaraan yang beliau dijatuhkan hukuman sebelumnya (lihat perenggan 5).
- G (3) Kesan gabungan ss 282 dan 292 adalah kecuali mahkamah mengenakan satu hukuman yang menyatakan sebaliknya, hukuman tersebut akan berkuatkuasa dari tarikh ia diputuskan (lihat perenggan 7).
- (4) Penggunaan budi bicara untuk menentukan tarikh bermulanya suatu hukuman penjara bergantung kepada fakta-fakta dan keadaan setiap kes. Dalam memutuskan sama ada terma-terma pemenjaraan hendaklah secara berturut-turut atau bermula pada tarikh lain mahkamah patut dipandu oleh satu rukun transaksi dan prinsip menyeluruh (lihat perenggan 7).
- H
- (5) Kedudukan undang-undang adalah ia pada amnya diterima di mana seseorang tertuduh patut diberikan pengurangan hukuman kerana membuat pengakuan bersalah. Pengurangan yang diberikan biasanya satu pengurangan hukuman sebanyak satu pertiga daripada apa yang sepatutnya dikenakan. Namun begitu ini bukan satu rukun yang ketat kerana mahkamah boleh, dalam menggunakan budi bicaranya, enggan memberikan apa-apa pengurangan dalam satu kes yang sesuai (lihat perenggan 17).
- I

- (6) Hakim mahkamah sesyen dengan jelas menyatakan bahawa dalam menjatuhkan hukuman beliau telah mengambilkira keseriusan kesalahan berdasarkan latar belakang mangsa; elemen kepentingan awam yang perlu dilaksanakan; kesan jenayah ke atas mangsa, hukuman sebelumnya yang dijalani oleh tertuduh; dan keperluan melindungi masyarakat daripada orang seperti tertuduh (lihat perenggan 19).]

Notes

For cases on concurrent or consecutive sentencing, see 5 Mallal's Digest (4th Ed, 2001 Reissue) paras 3312–3336.

For cases on plea of guilty, see 5 Mallal's Digest (4th Ed, 2001 Reissue) paras 2967–3000.

For sentences on imprisonment, see 18 Halsbury's Laws of Malaysia paras [310.476]–[310.480].

Cases referred to

Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor 42 Cal 957 (refd)
Ang Chai Seng v PP [2000] 2 MLJ 35 (refd)
Bhandulananda Jayatilake v PP [1982] 1 MLJ 83 (refd)
Chin Choy v PP [1955] 1 MLJ 236 (refd)
Christopher Khoo Ewe Cheng v PP [1998] 3 MLJ 881 (refd)
Crowley and Garner v R (1991) 55 A Crim R 201 (refd)
Jayaraman & Ors v PP [1979] 2 MLJ 88 (refd)
Kanagasuntharam v PP [1992] 1 SLR 81 (refd)
Leigh Nicholas Donnelly v R (1997) 91 A Crim R 550 (refd)
Loh Hock Seng & Anor v PP [1980] 2 MLJ 13 (refd)
Mohamed Abdullah Ang Swee Kang v PP [1988] 1 MLJ 167 (refd)
Ooi Sim Yim v PP [1990] 1 MLJ 88 (refd)
PP v Boon Kiah Kin [1993] 3 SLR 639 (refd)
PP v Dato Nallakaruppan Solaimalai [1999] 2 CLJ 596 (refd)
PP v Govindnan all Chinden Nair [1998] 2 MLJ 181 (refd)
PP v Leo Say & Ors [1985] 2 CLJ 155 (refd)
PP v Loo Choon Fatt [1976] 2 MLJ 256 (refd)
PP v Low Kok Wai [1988] 3 MLJ 123 (refd)
PP v Muhari bin Mohd Jani & Anor [1996] 3 MLJ 116 (refd)
PP v Oo Leng Swee & Ors [1981] 1 MLJ 247 (refd)
PP v Ravindran & Ors [1993] 1 MLJ 45 (refd)
PP v Sulaiman bin Ahmad [1993] 1 MLJ 74 (refd)
PP v Tia Ah Leng [2000] 5 MLJ 401 (refd)
R v Faulkner (1972) 56 Cr App R 594 (refd)
R v Saleem (1964) Crim LR 482 (refd)
R v Skinner (1986) 8 Cr App R (S) 166 (refd)
R v Vaitos (1981) 4 A Crim R 238 (refd)
R v Walsh (1965) Crim LR 248 (refd)
R v Wheatley (1983) 5 Cr App R (S) 417 (refd)

- A R v Wilson (1965) VLR 199 (refd)
Sadashiv Chhokha Sabte v State of Maharashtra (1993) Cr LJ 1469 (Bom) (DB) (refd)
Sau Soo Kim v PP [1975] 2 MLJ 134 (refd)
Shafruddin bin Selengka v PP [1994] 3 MLJ 750 (refd)
Sim Gek Yong v PP [1995] 1 SLR 537 (refd)
- B Sim Yeow Seng v PP [1995] 3 SLR 44 (refd)
Tan Lay Chen v PP [2001] 1 MLJ 135 (refd)
Wong Kai Chuen Philip v PP [1991] 1 MLJ 321 (refd)
Zaidon Shariff v PP [1996] 4 CLJ 441 (refd)

C Legislation referred to

Courts of Judicature Act 1964 s 60
Criminal Procedure Code ss 282(d), 292(1), (2), 427
Penal Code s 376

Appeal from: Criminal Appeal No 42–2 of 2003 (High Court, Muar)

D

Appellant in person.
Tengku Amir Zaki bin Tengku Abdul Rahman (Attorney General's Chambers) for the respondent.

E Augustine Paul JCA (delivering judgment of the court):

[1] The accused was charged with an offence of rape in the Sessions Court at Muar. The charge reads as follows:

F

Bahawa kamu pada 19 September 2001, di antara jam 6.45 petang hingga 8.45 malam di kawasan Kebun Kelapa Sawit Ladang Felcra, Bt 19, Air Hitam, Muar, di dalam daerah Muar, di dalam Negeri Johor telah merogol seorang kanak-kanak perempuan Melayu bernama Rabaitul Adawiyah bte Sulaiman (Tarikh Lahir 29 Januari 1990). Oleh yang demikian, kamu telah melakukan satu kesalahan yang boleh dihukum di bawah s 376 Kanun Keseksaan.

G

[2] The accused pleaded guilty. On 14 January 2003, the sessions court imposed a sentence of 18 years' imprisonment and 12 strokes of the rotan. The sentence was ordered to take effect consecutively to another term of imprisonment of 16 years that the accused was then serving. It was also for an offence of rape which was committed on 14 October 2001. It must be observed that that offence was committed subsequent to the offence in the present charge though it was disposed off earlier on 19 September 2002.

H

The sessions court refused an application by the accused to order the sentence imposed in this case to run concurrently with the earlier sentence. The accused appealed to the High Court against that order. Having rejected this part of the appeal, the High Court proceeded to reduce the term of imprisonment to 15 years on the ground that the sessions court had failed to consider the guilty plea of the accused. The accused appealed to this court for an order that both jail terms be made concurrent.

I

[3] The facts of the case reveal that on 19 September 2001 at about 6.45pm the complainant, a schoolgirl aged 11, was riding a bicycle in Parit Sulong.

The accused, who was driving a motor car, knocked into her from behind. She fell down and suffered some injuries. The accused asked her to get into his car so that he could help her. She refused. The accused then pulled her into his car and drove to an oil palm estate at Ladang Felcra, Batu 19, Air Hitam, Muar. There he came out of the car and went to the back seat. He took off the clothes of the complainant and raped her. The accused then dropped her near Parit Sulong. Medical evidence showed that the complainant had a fresh tear in the hymen. The facts of the case in respect of which the accused had already been convicted was similar. The accused had also forcibly abducted the victim from the road and had raped her.

[4] The learned judge dealt correctly with the appeal of the accused in relation to the date of commencement of the jail term in this case. The commencement of a sentence of imprisonment is governed by s 282(d) and s 292 of the Criminal Procedure Code ('s 282(d)' and 's 292' respectively). They read as follows:

Section 282(d)

With regard to sentences of imprisonment the following provisions shall be followed:

- (a) ...
- (b) ...
- (c) ...
- (d) every sentence of imprisonment shall take effect from the date on which it was passed unless the Court passing the sentence otherwise directs.

Section 292

- (1) When a person who is an escaped convict or is undergoing a sentence of imprisonment is sentenced to imprisonment, such imprisonment shall commence either immediately or at the expiration of the imprisonment to which he has been previously sentenced, as the Court awarding the sentence may direct.
- (2) A sentence of death shall be executed notwithstanding the pendency of any sentence of imprisonment.
- (3) Nothing in subsection (1) shall be held to excuse any person from any part of the punishment to which he is liable upon his former or subsequent conviction.

[5] Section 282(d) prescribes the general rule that a sentence of imprisonment shall take effect from the date on which it was passed unless the court passing the sentence otherwise directs. Section 292 is a specific provision dealing with the date of commencement of a sentence of imprisonment of a person who is already undergoing imprisonment. Under this section, the court may order the imprisonment to commence either immediately or at the expiration of the imprisonment to which he has been previously sentenced. An order that the subsequent prison term is to start immediately does not negate s 292(2) as adverted to in Shafruddin bin Selengka v Public Prosecutor [1994] 3 MLJ 750. It is expressly authorized by s 292(1) and what is prohibited is only that the term of imprisonment cannot commence at any point of time prior to the date of conviction. To that extent it cannot be concurrent to a prison term being served but will be part-concurrent.

- A The object of s 292(2) can be discerned upon a ratiocination of the phrase ‘undergoing a sentence of imprisonment’ in s 292(1). This is explained in Sarkar on Criminal Procedure (7th Ed) at p 1251 in the following terms:

- B A person sentenced to imprisonment must, for the purpose of s 427, be deemed to be undergoing that sentence from the very moment the sentence is passed. The accused may be on bail or in custody in the earlier case at the time of passing of the subsequent sentence. Literal construction of the terminology ‘undergoing a sentence of imprisonment’ would lead to absurd results especially where two separate sentences are awarded one after the other on one day in two separate trials. Either the judge would not exercise the discretion only because in earlier case (the) convicted (person) had not gone inside the jail by that time or he will have to actually send the convict inside the jail some time and call him back immediately to pronounce judgment in the second case. Such absurd and farcical situation could not be said to have been intended by the legislature (Sadashiv Chhokha Sabte v State of Maharashtra (1993) Cr LJ 1469 (Bom) (DB)).
- C

- D [6] Section 292(2) resolves the problem identified in the above passage. Pursuant to the subsection where a person is, say, on bail in respect of a prison term and is sentenced to imprisonment with immediate effect to another prison term for a subsequent conviction he will not thereby be excused from any part of the punishment to which he is liable upon his former conviction.

- E [7] The combined effect of s 282 and s 292 is that unless the court imposing a sentence says anything to the contrary, the sentence runs from the date on which it was passed (see Ooi Sim Yim v Public Prosecutor [1990] 1 MLJ 88). The exercise of the discretion to determine the date of commencement of the sentence of imprisonment is dependent on the facts and circumstances of each case. In deciding whether the terms of imprisonment should be consecutive or commence at another date, the court will be guided by the one transaction rule and the totality principle. Pursuant to the one transaction rule where two or more offences are committed in the course of a single transaction, all sentences in respect of these offences should be concurrent rather than consecutive (see R v Saleem (1964) Crim LR 482; R v Walsh (1965) Crim LR 248). For there to be one transaction four elements must be present, that is to say, proximity of time, proximity of place, continuity of action and continuity of purpose or design (see Jayaraman & Ors v Public Prosecutor [1979] 2 MLJ 88; Amrita Lal Hazra v Emperor 42 Cal 957; Chin Choy v Public Prosecutor [1955] 1 MLJ 236). The rule, however, is not absolute. As Yong Pung How CJ said in Kanagasuntharam v Public Prosecutor [1992] 1 SLR 81 at p 83:
- F
- G

- H The English courts have recognized that there are situations where consecutive sentences are necessary to discourage the type of criminal conduct being punished: see R v Faulkner (1972) 56 Cr App R 594, R v Wheatley (1983) 5 Cr App R (S) 417 and R v Skinner (1986) 8 Cr App R (S) 166. The applicability of the exception is said to depend on the facts of the case and the circumstances of the offence. It is stated in broad and general terms and although it may be criticized as vague, it is necessarily in such terms in order that the sentencer may impose an appropriate sentence in each particular case upon each particular offender at the particular time the case is heard.
- I

- [8] In explaining the totality principle, his Lordship referred (at p 85) to the view of DA Thomas in Principles of Sentencing (2nd Ed) at pp 57–58:

The many decisions of the court in which the totality principle has been applied to explain the reduction of a cumulative sentence made up of correctly calculated individual parts suggest that the principle has two limbs. A cumulative sentence may offend the totality principle if the aggregate sentence is substantially above the normal level of sentences for the most serious of the individual offences involved, or if its effect is to impose on the offender 'a crushing sentence' not in keeping with his records and prospects.

[9] In this regard, reference is also made to Emmins on Sentencing (2nd Ed) p 151:

It is well established that sentences must have regard to the total length of sentence passed, particularly where consecutive sentences have been imposed, to ensure that the sentence properly reflects the overall seriousness of the behaviour.

[10] There will be cases properly described as crushing the hope in the offender of reformation and a return to a desirable life but in which the offender has, by his criminal acts, forfeited any right to have his sentence reduced on that account (see Crowley and Garner v R (1991) 55 A Crim R 201). As O'Bryan J said in R v Vaitos (1981) 4 A Crim R 238 at p 301:

I have some difficulty appreciating the concept that a richly deserved sentence, not manifestly excessive, should be disturbed because the person upon whom the sentence is imposed may feel crushed by it. It is quite true that the applicant has to face a very long term of imprisonment before he will be released and because he is a comparatively young man, many of the best years of his life will be spent in custody. However, from the community point of view, his detention for a very substantial period is necessary to protect females from his criminal behaviour.

[11] Young CJ said in that case that the question of whether the sentence imposed is crushing cannot be answered mathematically by reference to the offender's age and the length of sentence to be served but by the circumstances of the case.

[12] The judgment of the learned sessions court judge illuminates the reasons that compelled him to order the sentence of imprisonment to be consecutive to the punishment imposed in respect of the previous offence. In this regard, the learned sessions court judge said in his grounds of judgment:

Dari fakta yang dinyatakan tadi adalah amat jelas bahawa hukuman yang paling berat mestilah dikenakan terhadap OKT kerana perbuatan OKT yang tanpa belas kasihan telah sanggup merogol seorang kanak-kanak yang begitu muda berumur hanya 11 tahun.

Bukan itu saja, OKT yang berumur 28 tahun telah mengambil kesempatan dan juga melakukan keganasan fizikal terhadap mangsa yang jauh lebih lemah dari segi fizikal. Di dalam rayuannya OKT memohon supaya hukuman berjalan serentak dengan hukuman yang sedang dijalankan sekarang. Menurutnya, beliau telah insaf dan tidak akan mengulangi perbuatan ini dan juga merayu kerana sudah dikenakan hukuman sebatan yang agak banyak dalam kes terdahulu.

Walaupun pengakuan bersalah OKT telah dapat menjimatkan masa dan perbelanjaan mahkamah tetapi dalam kes-kes yang melibatkan mangsa yang dirogol berumur di bawah 16 tahun maka kepentingan awam melampaui kepentingan individu. Kepentingan awam memerlukan kesalahan begini dipandang berat dan mewajarkan supaya suatu hukuman yang maksima sebagai pengajaran dan teladan

A

B

C

D

E

F

G

H

I

- A kepada masyarakat. Mahkamah bersetuju terhadap cadangan Timbalan Pendakwa Raya yang mengesa supaya hukuman berat dijatuhkan kerana perbuatan sebegini amat berleluasa dan kesannya melibatkan trauma kepada mangsa yang sepatutnya mempunyai masa depan yang cerah.

- B Mahkamah juga mengambil maklum bahawa OKT sedang menjalani hukuman bagi kes rogol yang lain di mana mahkamah telah menjatuhkan hukuman 16 tahun penjara dan 8 kali sebatan rotan. Pada pandangan mahkamah nampaknya penglibatan OKT di dalam jenayah adalah lebih kepada kesalahan seksual yang kejam. OKT sekiranya tidak dibendung perbuatannya ini dari awal lagi maka kemungkinan besar beliau akan melakukan kesalahan yang sama terhadap mangsa-mangsa yang berlainan pada masa hadapan. Oleh itu amatlah berbahaya sekali kepada masyarakat umum sekiranya penjenayah seperti OKT ini diteruskan untuk bergaul di kalangan masyarakat umum kerana beliau mempunyai keupayaan dan potensi untuk melakukan kesalahan ini beberapa kali pada masa depan dengan akibat yang lebih teruk kepada mangsa-mangsanya. Tidakkah keterlaluan sekiranya mahkamah menganggap OKT mempunyai ciri-ciri seorang perogol bersiri (serial rapist) yang menjadi masalah besar kepada polis dan ketenteraman awam pada masa kini.

- D [13] In agreeing with the views expressed, the learned judge said in pp 10–11 of his judgment:

Those comments were strong, but were not without reasonable basis. Rape is a heinous crime which must be severely punished. And in the case of both rapes committed by the appellant, they were most primordial. The appellant was just a savage. In both cases, he just snatched young and defenceless girls from the streets and raped them. The trial court was not wrong to say that the appellant was a real threat to the public, and to young girls in particular. The public must be protected. There was certainly good and justifiable reason to order a consecutive sentence. In any event, both offences were unrelated. A concurrent term of imprisonment would effectively result in the appellant not being imprisoned at all for the second offence. And that would not do any justice to the instant victim who would surely have to bear forever the ugly memory of rape, if not any of the undeserved stigma of rape. Each rape must be punished. This is certainly not a case to disturb the order of a consecutive sentence.

- G [14] It must be remembered that both the offences were executed in the same manner and are of the same severity and are unrelated. It cannot be denied that the cumulative effect of both the sentences will have a crushing effect on the accused bearing in mind his age. But this effect must be balanced against the seriousness of the offences committed by him and the need to protect young females from him. The order made by the High Court in upholding the direction of the sessions court on the commencement of the jail term imposed in this case is therefore correct in law and we are unable to interfere.
- H

[15] We consider it necessary to deal with the reduction of the sentence imposed on the accused to 15 years by the High Court. The learned judge first enumerated the circumstances in which an appellate court may interfere with a sentence that had been passed. As he said in p 3 of his judgment:

- I ... the appellate court is ready to interfere with the sentence imposed by the trial court upon proof of one or more of the following circumstances: (a) The sentence imposed by the trial court was manifestly excessive or inadequate. (b) There is a manifest error either in law or in considering the facts and circumstances of the case. (c) The sentence passed by the trial court is manifestly wrong in the sense of being illegal or of being unsuitable to the proved facts and circumstances. (d) The trial court has given undue weight to some of the evidence. (e) The trial court, in fixing the sentence, had failed to adequately consider all the relevant factors either for or against the offender. (f) The sentence was wrong in law. (g) The unsatisfactory features of the proceedings in the lower court. (h) The charge has been hanging over the accused's head for a considerable period. (i) Justice does not appear to have been done. (Civil and Criminal Appeals in Malaysia by Tan Kee Heng at pp 191–192)

[16] He then referred to Ang Chai Seng v Public Prosecutor [2000] 2 MLJ 35; Public Prosecutor v Loo Choon Fatt [1976] 2 MLJ 256 and Bhandulananda Jayatilake v Public Prosecutor [1982] 1 MLJ 83 which support the proposition that an appellate court will not alter a sentence merely because it might have passed a different sentence. The learned judge then referred to Sau Soo Kim v Public Prosecutor [1975] 2 MLJ 134; Public Prosecutor v Ravindran & Ors [1993] 1 MLJ 45 and Mohamed Abdullah Ang Swee Kang v Public Prosecutor [1988] 1 MLJ 167 which dealt with the credit that should be given to a guilty plea. In holding that the sessions court had not adhered to this rule, he said in p 8 of his judgment:

If there had not been a plea of guilty but a finding of guilt after trial, 20 years was the maximum term of imprisonment that could have been imposed. If 20 years would have been the term of imprisonment, then at the most, on account of the plea of guilty, the appellant could only be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 13–15 years. But no credit or discount or no real credit or real discount was given to the appellant for pleading guilty. As a matter of fact, the subject of credit or discount for pleading guilty was somehow forgotten altogether. And that lapse should be put right. The term of imprisonment is therefore reduced to 15 years, which is three-quarters of the maximum term of imprisonment. The Appellant who appeared in person made out no case deserving anything less.

[17] The learned judge appears to have taken the view that credit should be given in every case where a person pleads guilty. The position in law is that it is generally accepted that an accused person should be given credit or discount for pleading guilty (see Sau Soo Kim v Public Prosecutor [1975] 2 MLJ 134; Public Prosecutor v Sulaiman bin Ahmad [1993] 1 MLJ 74; Public Prosecutor v Ravindran & Ors [1993] 1 MLJ 45). The discount that is given is normally a reduction of the sentence by about a third of what would otherwise have been imposed (see Mohamed Abdullah Ang Swee Kang v Public Prosecutor [1988] 1 MLJ 167; PP v Muhari bin Mohd Jani & Anor [1996] 3 MLJ 116; Christopher Khoo Ewe Cheng v Public Prosecutor [1998] 3 MLJ 881). However, this is not a strict rule as the court may, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse to grant any discount in an appropriate case (see Zaidon Shariff v Public Prosecutor [1996] 4 CLJ 441; Public Prosecutor v Leo Say & Ors [1985] 2 CLJ 155). Its application in favour of an accused depends on the facts and circumstances of each case (see Wong Kai Chuen Philip v Zaidon Shariff [1991] 1 MLJ 321). Thus, as lucidly explained by Charles JA in Leigh Nicholas Donnelly v R (1997) 91 A Crim R 550 at p 554:

A court's attitude towards the fact of a plea of guilty is expected to act as an encouragement to enter such a plea. The issue with which the court is to be concerned is what weight should be given to it in the circumstances.

- A [18] The circumstances in which a guilty plea will not have any weight are varied. The severity of the offence committed may outweigh the mitigating effect of a guilty plea (see Loh Hock Seng & Anor v Public Prosecutor [1980] 2 MLJ 13; Public Prosecutor v Oo Leng Swee & Ors [1981] 1 MLJ 247). Where public interest demands a deterrent sentence in the circumstances of a particular case, then the effect of a guilty plea must also give way (see Sim Gek Yong v Public Prosecutor [1995] 1 SLR 537; Public Prosecutor v Govindnan a/l Chinden Nair [1998] 2 MLJ 181). A guilty plea cannot also be a powerful mitigating factor when effectively no defence to the charge is available to the accused (see Leo Say v Low Kok Wai [1988] 3 MLJ 123). If a plea of guilty is made too late in the trial it may also cease to have mitigating effect (see Public Prosecutor v Dato Nallakuruppan Solaimalai [1999] 2 CLJ 596). The absence of mitigating factors in favour of the accused like, for instance, the existence of previous convictions may also deprive the guilty plea of its effect. There can therefore be no automatic rule that a guilty plea on its own entitles an accused to a lesser punishment (see Public Prosecutor v Tia Ah Leng [2000] 5 MLJ 401). Be that as it may, where there is a departure from the general rule the reason for not treating the guilty plea as a mitigating factor must be reflected in the grounds of judgment (see Tan Lay Chen v Public Prosecutor [2001] 1 MLJ 135).
- B
- C
- D

- [19] In the light of the law that we have adverted to what requires consideration is whether in the circumstances of this case the guilty plea of the accused ought to have been treated as a mitigating factor in his favour and, if it is not to be so, whether the sessions court was aware of it. The relevant part of the judgment of the learned sessions court judge that we have reproduced earlier makes it patently clear that in imposing sentence he had taken into consideration the seriousness of the offence against the background of the physical weakness and age of the victim; the element of public interest to be served; the effect of the crime on the victim; the previous sentence being served by the accused; and the need to protect society from persons like him. We interpolate to add that the sentence that the accused was then serving in respect of a conviction for an offence committed subsequent to the current offence and convicted earlier will rank as a previous conviction. In this regard, we refer to Sim Yeow Seng v Public Prosecutor [1995] 3 SLR 44 where Yong Pung How CJ sitting in the High Court said at p 47:
- E
- F
- G

- The rationale of PP v Boon Kiah Kin [1993] 3 SLR 639 and, indeed, Lowe J's judgment in R v Wilson (1965) VLR 199 is that a sentencing court should have regard to all of the accused's antecedents up to the moment of sentencing because these antecedents reveal his character, his attitudes and the likelihood of rehabilitation. So long as previous convictions are shown to exist, therefore, it does not matter whether they were in respect of offences committed before or subsequent to the offence for which the court is considering sentence.
- H

- [20] The learned sessions court judge had also referred to the effect of a guilty plea and had gone on to explain why it cannot operate as a mitigating factor in this case. It is therefore not appropriate to say that the sessions court had 'somehow forgotten altogether' the effect of a guilty plea. As the sessions court judge had acted properly in imposing the sentence that he did it ought not to have been disturbed by the High Court.
- I

[21] There was, however, no appeal by the public prosecutor against the reduction of the sentence by the High Court. The learned deputy public prosecutor invited us to reinstate the sentence imposed by the sessions court pursuant to s 60 of the Courts of Judicature Act 1964. This is a matter where the public prosecutor could have appealed but did not do so. It is our view that in such a situation the exercise of discretion under this provision of law is only appropriate upon sufficient cause being shown for the failure to appeal. This was not done. This, however, does not preclude the court from acting on its own motion where it is desirable to do so in the interests of justice. The facts of this case did not warrant such an intervention by us. In arriving at our decision, we took into account the total of the two consecutive jail terms that the accused has to serve in accordance with the totality principle. While we are not prepared to say that the total of 34 years imprisonment that the accused would have had to serve, if not reduced by three years by the High Court, is certainly not too much bearing in mind the similarity of the system in which both the offences were carried out we were of the view that the reinstatement of the three years' imprisonment will not make a material difference to the 31 years' imprisonment that the accused already has to serve. Accordingly, we declined to accede to the invitation of the learned deputy public prosecutor.

[22] In the upshot, we dismissed the appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

Reported by Mariette Peters-Goh

A

B

C

D

E

F

G

H

I